INTRODUCTION

It is often said that failure is an acceptable by-product of experimentation, but not when it comes to Mission Critical Strategy Implementation. These are usually zero-failure outcomes on which the very existence of the organisation may depend. Once Top Management identifies these outcomes, it puts its best resources – men, money and machines – together to ensure that it wins.

But to achieve these, all staff across all levels must know what these are, know the expected outcomes, plan together in the open, and develop a common language with which to ensure that every one is on the same page as regards, outcomes, sequencing, ongoing assessment and clear-cut responsibilities.

Participants are taught how to identify a High-Definition Outcome, identify Centers of Gravity within concentric spheres of influence and learn a new way to implement such that the COGs are moved simultaneously in a chosen direction to ensure a desired outcome.

This is the training for organisations and teams where failure is not an option.
